HALAL DINING • PRAYER SPACES • CULTURE • STORIES

MAP OF SEVEN NEIGHBOURHOODS

This Muslim-friendly guide to the seven main neighbourhoods around Singapore helps you make the best of your stay.

FOREWORD

Muslim-friendly Singapore

Muslims comprise over 15% percent of Singapore's population and it is no surprise that this island state offers a large variety of Muslim-friendly gastronomic experiences. Many of these have been Halal certified by MUIS, also known as the Islamic Religious Council of Singapore (Majlis Ugama Islam Singapura). Visitors can also consider Muslim-owned food establishments throughout the city. Furthermore, mosques and musollahs around the island allow you to fulfill your religious obligations while you are on vacation.

As a Muslim traveller, this guide provides you with the information you need to enjoy your stay in Singapore – a city where your passions in life are made possible. You may also download the MuslimSG app and follow @halalSG on Twitter for any Halal related queries while in Singapore.

INTRODUCTION

Muslim-friendly Destination

Singapore has a vibrant and diverse multi-cultural community with accessible Muslim-friendly facilities such as Halal food and prayer spaces in popular areas. This guide helps you to identify the different Halal certified and Muslim-owned establishments around the city.

Ramadan Bazaar

Each year, regardless of race or religion, Singaporeans will flock to the Geylang Serai Ramadan Bazaar for their annual dosage of trendy food, traditional apparel and kuih (traditional Malay sweets) during Ramadan. That is when the bazaar becomes a food and shopping haven. Experience the Ramadan Bazaar in its full glory from when the sun sets till late. You will definitely not want to miss this annual event!

Did You Know?

Singapore is ranked as the top Muslim-friendly destination among non-OIC (Organization of Islamic Cooperation) countries for six consecutive years, according to the Mastercard-CrescentRating Global Muslim Travel Index.

Iftar with the Locals

Most mosques or masjids (masajid) as they are called here, provide iftar meals throughout Ramadan. The iftar meals may vary from a dulang style where four to five people share a meal from one large tray or bento style where each individual receives a set meal. A common practice among mosques is porridge distribution, which occurs at various times depending on the mosque. Ramadan is the month of giving and improving our deeds; a perfect opportunity to foster closer ties with the local community!

TIPS

Useful tips for navigating Muslim-friendly Singapore

Variety of Halal Food in Singapore

Singapore is home to a wide variety of Halal cuisines, from Japanese, Chinese, Korean to Middle Eastern, Western and more. Most fast food chains in Singapore are Halal certified by MUIS. For a quick fix, head over to some of them such as McDonald's, Burger King, KFC, Long John Silver's, Popeyes and Texas Chicken.

The metropolis has an abundance of Halal restaurants that have been made easily identifiable in this guide by two different Halal logos.

Halal Certified Establishments

Eating establishments bearing this logo indicate that they have been Halal certified by Majlis Ugama Islam Singapura (MUIS), also known as the Islamic Religious Council of Singapore. MUIS is the Islamic authority in-charge of Muslim affairs in Singapore. It provides Halal Certification services and regulates the Singapore Halal industry.

Halal Establishments

Restaurants accompanied with this Halal logo indicate that, while they may not have been Halal certified by MUIS, they are still Halal and are safe to dine in. In this case, the restaurant is either Muslim-owned or uses 100% Halal ingredients and is frequently patronised by local Muslims.

Halal Food at Hawker Centres

Hawker centres are a familiar sight in the city, recognisable by numerous stalls lined up next to each other. Also affectionately referred to by locals as kopitiams, these are food complexes offering various types of cuisines. You will be able to find Halal stalls by looking out for the MUIS Halal certified logo. Although they share a common eating space, you can be assured that the Halal stalls are identified by different coloured cutleries and have a separate wash and tray return area.

Prayer Facilities

Singapore offers plenty of stunning mosques and convenient musollahs (designated prayer rooms in public spaces) should you need a break from sightseeing to perform your daily prayers.

All mosques provide a dedicated female prayer and ablution area with privacy as well as female prayer garments.

Al-Falah Mosque

'Masjid' and 'Falah' are both Arabic words which translate to 'mosque' and 'success' in English respectively. Al-Falah Mosque is a convenient place for Muslims to pray while shopping and sightseeing in Orchard Road.

TANGS

TANGS was formerly known as C.K Tangs, named after its founder Mr Tang Choon Keng. The building was modeled after a traditional imperial palace and takes influence from Chinese culture and architecture.

Istana

Istana means 'palace' in the Malay language and it is the office and official residence of the President of Singapore. It is open to public on gazetted public holidays.

THE NEIGHBOURHOOD

Bussorah Street

Previously known as Sultan Road, Bussorah Street is uniquely regarded as the heart of Kampong Gelam. This picturesque street is home to the best architecture, Halal cafes and restaurants. It is also the best place to shop for souvenirs, perfume, antiques, jewellery and so much more.

Kampong Gelam Murals

Take a stroll around Kampong Gelam and admire the impressive array of street art murals that adorn the facades of cafes and boutique stores in vibrant hues. These works of art were created by local and international artists like Didier Jaba Mathieu, Sheryo x The Yok, Oak and Bindi and more.

Haji Lane

Explore the lively and eclectic street of Haji Lane as you walk past its multi-label stores, quirky boutiques and hip cafes. Haji Lane is peppered with stores carrying local wares, which would make great souvenirs for loved ones.

SULTAN MOSQUE

The Sultan Mosque is one of the largest mosques in Singapore. The mosque's design combines traditional Indian and Islamic elements, alongside some European architectural features. Its massive golden domes are decorated with the ends of glass bottles, which were donated by lower-income Muslims in 1824.

VISIT MAJESTIC MOSQUES

HAJJAH FATIMAH MOSQUE

Funded by Hajjah Fatimah herself, this mosque lies just above the area where Hajjah Fatimah's home used to be. The mosque uses Eastern and European elements in its design. Take the Chinese glazed green tiles on its parapet for example. You can also spot Singapore's own 'leaning tower' - a four level minaret which tilts at an angle of about six degrees.

Teater Ekamatra

ekamatra.org.sg | +65 6435 0131

Teater Ekamatra was founded in 1988 to develop a form of experimental Malay theatre that fuses Southeast Asian theatre styles with contemporary techniques. Since then, the company has expanded its reach to both the Malay community and non-Malay audiences, focusing on general socio-political themes in its production.

♦ Alival Arts Centre, 28 Alival Street #02-10, S199918

Sometimes passion chooses you instead. Mohd Fared Jainal is the current Artistic Director of Teater Ekamatra but he started out as a graphic designer with love for all forms of art. With an interest in the Malay arts throughout childhood, Fared went into theatre after graduating with a Masters in Arts (Design) from LASELLE College of the Arts. He started out with set design but was soon roped in as a calefare. He then realised how much he loved performing as an actor. From there, he pursued acting at several theatre companies, across different countries and eventually directing plays.

Wardah Books

wardahbooks.com | +65 6297 1232

Wardah Books is an independent bookstore carrying English books that cover a wide range of topics such as Sufism and Islamic history. They have a whole shelf dedicated to children's books as well. Find a comfortable spot in the two-storey shophouse and browse through book collections that were personally curated by the owner, Ibrahim Tahir.

♦ Daily 10am - 6pm ♦ 58 Bussorah Street, S199474

At a time when bookstores all over the world were closing down, Ibrahim Tahir's belief that there was room in the world for a bookstore specialising in English Islamic books, keeps Wardah Books thriving. Seventeen years ago, he opened a small bookstore along North Bridge Road with just a few bookshelves. He believed that these books deserve to take up more than one shelf in a general bookstore. Today, Wardah Books at Bussorah Street is where readers go to be inspired by books on Islamic history, spirituality, philosophy, and current affairs.

KARVA Salon for ladies

karva.sg | +65 6291 1205

This salon caters to hijab-wearing ladies. Guests are treated in privacy and the salon uses only Halal certified hair products and water permeable nail polishes on their customers.

♦ Daily 11am - 8pm ♦ 73A Bussorah Street, S199486

For wife and husband duo, Rozza Ramli and Jai Wahab, KARVA was born out of their shared interests in grooming.

'I was not an ambitious person. I wanted to have five kids and imagined myself as a housewife,' said Rozza. After her fourth child, she wondered about what she would do in her free time as her children started to grow up. When Rozza was a flight stewardess, she would check herself into salons during her layovers. She then realised that there was no salon on par with Toni & Guy in Singapore for Muslim ladies. Hence, came the inspiration behind KARVA.

CALL FATPAPAS TO RESERVE A TABLE TODAY

Sheikh Haikel, the Singaporean rapper and movie / TV star-turned-F&B entrepreneur is always forthcoming with his opinions and ideas. He always communicates them with his trademark sense of humour.

At the beginning of his career as an F&B entrepreneur, Haikel's philosophy was simple: what about us?

'We see all these nice restaurants in Singapore with fantastic food, but they are not Halal. Why can't we have the same? I want the same taste, the same quality, the same flavour, but Halal.'

For seven years, he pursued his dream of having a Halal burger place and never gave up. FatPapas was finally established in 2017.

Fort Siloso

Sentosa translates to peace and tranquility in Malay. Contrary to its name, Sentosa island did not have a peaceful and tranquil past. During WWII, Sentosa island was a British military stronghold against Japanese forces and Fort Siloso became a prisoner of war camp until the country's independence in 1945. Today, it is Singapore's only preserved coastal fort, which houses the nation's largest collection of WWII memorabilia.

MARINA BAY

A horizon of skyscrapers, each with its own story. Walk down the scenic promenade and be amazed at how the skyline illuminates.

Merlion
The Merlion is a mythical creature and an amalgamation of a lion's head and the lower half of a fish. It symbolises the island's history as a fishing village and sea town.

Esplanade
Nicknamed 'The Durian' by locals for its appearance, the iconic structure also appears on the city's 5-cent coins!

Singapore River Bumboat
Also known as tongkang (sea-going barge), these wooden boats were employed from the 19th to 20th century to transport goods along the Rochor, Kallang and Singapore rivers.
